The Hampshire Downs are a long range of chalky hills which run through the county along the Hampshire border, rising to a height of 600 to 1,000 feet above sea level. An old Roman road, known as the Ridge Way, runs along the crest, its course being marked by a succession of camps and tumuli. Other objects of interest are the White Horse Hill, Wayland Smith's cave, Seven Barrows, and Uffington Castle.
